ROOM TO WRITE

A Project of Path & Pen

A WEEKEND AWAY - JUST YOU AND A PEN.

APRIL 7-10, 2011
SCARRITT-BENNETT CENTER

The act of putting pen to paper encourages pause for thought, this in turn makes us think more deeply about life, which helps us regain our equilibrium. - NORBET PLATT

Writers often have to carve out precious moments from hectic schedules in order to practice their craft. Twice each year, (spring and fall) Room to Write invites writers to get away for a long weekend of writing, writing, eating, a bit of conversation, and more writing.

Room to Write is not a conference, but a time for uninterrupted creativity. Participants write in three-hour blocks, breaking only for meals and optional mind-stretching exercises (meditation or walking Scarritt Bennett's labyrinth) and gather at the end of the weekend to share successes. Projects range from business plans to poetry and song lyrics to an upcoming episode of a hot television show. Participants enter into contracts with one another, pledging to complete whatever they think they can accomplish over the weekend.

Room to Write welcomes writers at any stage in their writing careers. For those who would like feedback, the program provides optional editorial guidance from writing doctor, Charlotte Rains Dixon, and help with building an online presence and audience from media consultant, Janet Wallace of thesocialdeviants.com.

TO REGISTER: Online at <http://conta.cc/ikknz>, mail or fax registration form attached, call (615) 340-7557 or email programs@scarrittbennett.org.
